Clouds of 9/11 still linger

Terrorist threat unlikely to disrupt weekend ceremonies

Staff and wire reports
Undaunted by talk of a new terror threat, New Yorkers and Washingtonians wove among police armed with assault rifles and waited with varying degrees of patience at checkpoints Friday while intelligence officials scrambled to nail down information on a possible al-Qaida strike timed to the 10th anniversary of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

zero in New York City to the Inland Empire, are preparing to recall the shock and horror and humanity of the attacks in ceremonies this weekend.
Counterterrorism officials have been working around the clock to determine whether the threat is accurate, and extra security was put in place to protect the people in the two cities that took the brunt of the jetliner attacks that killed nearly 3,000 people at the

Moments of silence planned

Stores, churches to reflect on attacks

Staff Reports
Moments of silence have been asked Sunday morning to remember the victims and the efforts of emergency personnel in the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks on the East Coast.
Customers and employees at all 167 Stater Bros. supermarkets will pause for 60 seconds at 9:11 a.m. Each store manager will make an announcement asking all the customers and employees who are inside the supermarket at that time to pause for one minute.

Jack H. Brown, chairman and CEO of Stater Bros. said, "The Stater Bros. supermarket family will join together with each other and our customers this Sunday to remember the innocent lives that were lost on that fateful day 10 years ago. This is a time when we need to all connect as Americans." The Pomona Police Department has asked residents and churches in Pomona to join its members in a moment of silence Sunday at 10 a.m. The department has also suggested that Pomona churches with bell towers ring their bells for 60 seconds at 10 a.m. In addition, Los Angeles County Supervisor Michael D. Antonovich has ordered that all flags be lowered to half-staff on all county buildings Sunday.

CULTURE PLANS

An artistic endeavor

Officials hope projects will boost city

By Monica Rodriguez
Staff Writer

POMONA — The arts serve as food for the mind and soul, but in Pomona efforts are underway to use culture to build communities, empower people and bolster civic pride.

Residents, artists, business people and others have all been collaborating to help develop a cultural plan approved by the Pomona City Council in February.

Some of those same people participated in the work that led to the development of a visual and performing arts education plan — known as the Arts for All plan — adopted by the Pomona Unified School District Board of Education last month.

"It's interesting because it's all coming together at the same time," said Pomona resident and artist A.S. Ashley.

Ashley participated in developing both plans and is a firm believer that culture can play a critical role in fighting crime, bringing businesses to the city and building community pride.

Both plans provide opportunities for greater interaction among professional artists and students leading to solid arts education programs, he said.

Those programs can foster art projects that can turn a neglected vacant lot or a vandalized wall into a setting for a student sculpture or mural, Ashley said.

That same project can

Suspect in rapes back in jail

D.A. refiles 18 counts in case

By Will Bigham Staff Writer

RANCHO CUCAMONGA — An Ontario man accused of raping and torturing two women was arrested this week after prosecutors refiled charges in a case that was dropped two months ago.

Tremaine Ulysses Smiler, 39, was arrested in San Bernardino at 6:20 p.m. Thursday, the same day prosecutors filed an 18-count felony complaint against him.

The counts filed against Smiler, an alleged pimp, are the same that were dropped in July because prosecutors were unable to locate Smiler's alleged victims to testify in a trial.

Smiler refused to waive his constitutional right to a speedy trial, and he was released from jail shortly after

Barstow opposes redistricting plan

Officials say it splits Latino vote

By Neil Nisperos Staff Writer

Barstow officials are opposing a San Bernardino County redistricting plan they say would dilute the city's Latino vote and separate neighbors with similar political interests.

The county's proposed plan would move Barstow from the 1st District to the 3rd District.

But it's a proposal that would move the city from a district with a 40 percent Latino population to one that's 33 percent Latino, Barstow officials said.

That would be inconsistent with the federal Voting Rights Act, they said.

"It's certainly a concern from our standpoint," said City

Energy savers

A Pomona family has won a home energy makeover from the Los Angeles County-sponsored Energy Upgrade California program.

Today there will be an open house from 10 a.m. to noon at the Pomona home of William and Cynthia Bryan.

It will show off some of the $10,000 in improvements which will result in a energy cost savings of at least 40 percent for the family.

The open house is at 3 Rancho Vista Place.
