Families of fallen seek end to wars

By Thomas Himes Staff Writer

While the killing of Osama bin Laden offers little comfort to local residents who lost loved ones in the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, the family members of some servicemen said his death has given them cause to hope for the quick withdrawal of U.S. forces from the Middle East.

News Sunday that bin Laden was killed by U.S. forces in Pakistan after a decade-long manhunt gave Leticia De La Pena reason to reflect on her son, and his life and death, she said.

Esau De La Pena-Hernandez, a La Puente native, was on his fifth combat tour when he was shot and killed in a battle outside Chak, Afghanistan, on May 15, 2009. He was 25.

De La Pena said bin Laden's demise offered little solace to her and her family.

"The death of this person isn't going to replace my son or the other young people who gave their life for this country," she said.

The nearly decade-old war in Afghanistan and eight-year-old war in Iraq reached a grim milestone last month when the Department of Defense reported 6,000 U.S. servicemen and women had been killed in the conflicts.

Wayne Hiltz also said Monday that bin Laden's death has

Unwary call led U.S. to bin Laden

By Adam Goldman and Matt Apuzzo Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When one of Osama bin Laden's most trusted aides picked up the phone last year, he unknowingly led U.S. pursuers to the doorstep of his boss, the world's most wanted terrorist.

That phone call, recounted Monday by a U.S. official, ended a yearslong search for bin Laden's personal courier, the key break in a worldwide manhunt. The courier, in turn, led U.S. intelligence to a walled compound in northeast Pakistan, where a team of Navy SEALs shot bin Laden to death.

The violent final minutes were the culmination of years of intelligence work. Inside the CIA team hunting bin Laden, it always was clear that bin Laden's vulnerability was his couriers. He was too smart to let al-Qaida foot soldiers, or even his senior commanders, know his hideout. But if he wanted to get his messages out, somebody had to carry them, someone bin Laden trusted with his life.

In a secret CIA prison in Eastern Europe years ago, al-Qaida's No. 3 leader, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, gave authorities the nicknames of several of bin Laden's couriers, four former U.S. intelligence officials said. Those names were among thousands of leads the CIA was pursuing.

One man became a particular interest for the agency when another detainee, Abu Faraj al-Libi, told interrogators

D.A.: Inquiry isn't an 'investigation'

By Bethania Palma Markus Staff Writer

A public corruption prosecutor said Monday she was mistaken last week when she referred to an inquiry into Montebello bank accounts as an "investigation."

On Friday, Deputy D.A. Jennifer Lentz Snyder said the case of two off-the-books city bank accounts was under investigation.

At least two complaints were submitted to the L.A. County District Attorney's Public Integrity Division since the accounts were discovered in February. The D.A.'s office has opened a review, Deputy D.A. Dave Demerjian said Monday.

An investigator has been assigned, and his office has obtained city documents, but Demerjian said he is still reviewing the case — not investigating.

"We can't designate it an investigation until we determine a crime has occurred,
